Nuci’s Space hosts a “Music Heals All” event for music health awareness week

ATHENS, Ga. --- In honor of Mental Health Awareness Week, Nuci’s Space will hold a concert in its facility on Friday, Oct. 12. Musicians around the community are encouraged to attend this event from 7-9 p.m. to promote mental illness and hear Hakeem Rahim, a leading African-American voice in mental illness speak. Well-known artists from around the community will also be in attendance to share their stories and music.

Nuci’s Space will provide candles to each attendee in honor of those who have taken their lives due to mental illness. Each attendee will wear green and be given a sticker that says “music heals all” to promote the idea that mental illness can affect anyone, and music is the universal healing tool.

Eight out of 10 individuals suffering from mental illness think about committing suicide. Mental Health Awareness Week is dedicated to promoting awareness. Nuci’s Space is joining in to help unite those suffering by using music as a rehabilitation tool.

Nuci’s Space is a nonprofit organization dedicated to ending the stigma of brain and mental illness. Founded in 1999 by the mother of a suicide victim, Nuci’s Space has raised thousands of dollars and served hundreds of musicians suffering from mental illness in the Athens, Ga. area. This organization is currently the only nonprofit in Clarke County aimed at helping musicians fight through their brain illnesses.
